PRESS RELEASE 11th December 2009

More power for Clubmans

The Clubmans Register - celebrating its 45th Anniversary in 2010 - has announced a new Proto class for the 2010 BARC Dunlop Clubmans Cup Championship. Running alongside the existing 125-130 bhp Clubmans Cup class, Proto will have 170 bhp DVA engines with 4 or 5 speed H pattern or sequential gearboxes, and with flat-shift paddle systems allowed. 2011 will see another power increase to 190bhp for the Proto DVA units, while still allowing the existing Clubmans Cup cars to continue indefinitely.

Eight cars are already committed to the new Proto class for the season's start at Oulton Park on March 27th. Mallock Sports has immediately confirmed a new order for their latest Proto Clubmans chassis. Existing Clubmans Cup cars can be upgraded for under £3,000.

In announcing the new Proto class, Clubmans Register Chairman, Jamie Champkin, said "I'm delighted that from 2010 Clubmans cars will be lapping close to F3 times once again while still concentrating on cost-capping. The Clubmans Classic, Cup and Proto classes give drivers the thrill of slicks, wings and downforce, plus safety and a friendly Paddock. With this new class we are not only re-introducing extreme race car performance but also reopening the door for inventive engineers as well. We currently have a number of Motorsport engineering graduates and undergraduates bringing their expertise to the formulae and also gaining valuable experience themselves. In addition, some successful and renowned race car engineers have also returned to our midst."
